WHY RPA?

The RPA designation is offered by The Society of Professional Accountants of Canada. To obtain the RPA designation, students don't need to have a university degree. RPA provides relevant and necessary accounting knowledge through its comprehensive prerequisite courses offered by universities and community colleges.

RPA's are qualified as a professional accountant and recognized for excellence to secure a well paying job while maintaining high standards with balanced approach to their personal and professional responsibilities.

The RPA study program is specifically tailored to provide the students with the expertise to analyze financial information which will give them the confidence to take on a leadership role in Small to Medium-Sized Enterprise (SME).

The RPA designation facilitates a harmonious existence, where structured routines and foreseeable work cycles empower you with the flexibility to enrich your personal and professional endeavors. Being an RPA isn't just about a fulfilling career—it's a ticket to a balanced lifestyle.
